IRV DRASNIN

Irv Drasnin has been a professional journalist for 25 years. He began as a general assignment reporter and re-write editor for UPI after receiving a B.A. from UCLA in political science and international relations and an M.A. from Harvard University in East Asian studies with a specialization in China. His interest in China led him to become a member of the National Committee on U.S./China Relations and a founding member and research fellow as well as co-chairman of the China Council of the Asia Society from 1980 to 1982.

For the past five years, he has produced documentaries for PBS including three Frontline programs: "Is Nothing Sacred?," "The Other Side of the Track," and "Looking for Mao"; and "Eye of the Beholder" for Inside Story Special for which he won a Wilbur Award.

He worked for CBS for twenty years — five as a producer for "The CBS Evening News with Walter Cronkite" — and during the 1970s produced, wrote and directed fifteen documentary films including "The Guns of Autumn" for which he won awards from the Writers' Guild and the Directors' Guild; "Voices From the Russian Underground," which won a Saturday Review Award; and "A Black View of South Africa" which won an Emmy.

Drasnin has taught communications and U.S./China relations at Stanford University and was a visiting professor in journalism at the University of California at Berkeley in 1981.
